Fosfor is Håkon Storm's sixth release under his own name. As a guitarist he works in the interface between an exploratory, expressive playing style, melodious lines and poetic sound surfaces. Fosfor is a new, exciting journey in landscapes that Håkon Storm is unique in creating. The use of a variety of acoustic and electric guitars produces a wide range of contrasting variations. The result is distinctive and original guitar music. The album was recorded live at Rainbow Studio with Jan Erik Kongshaug at the control board. The sound quality of the recording is exceptionally high, and represents a clear step forward from the NORCD release Zinober. As a guitarist, composer and bandleader, Storm has a broad background. He has played rock, fusion and jazz, as well as more experimental contemporary music, in which he explores the sound-producing potential of the guitar. He has composed music for both big bands and smaller ensembles. Storm works regularly with his own projects, and has toured in Japan and the USA, in addition to Europe. He also teaches at the Norwegian Academy of Music in Oslo.
